

PRIVACY POLICY

TM Deer Park Services Limited Partnership (“Texas Molecular”, “we”, “us” or “our”) respects the preferences of our customers and other visitors that access this Internet site to learn about or interact with us concerning the collection, storage, access and use of their personal and business information. Texas Molecular is continually developing mechanisms to enhance the user experience on this Website and to provide our users with greater choice related to information use and disclosure. By accessing the Texas Molecular Website (the “Site”), you agree to the Texas Molecular Privacy Policy. It is important that you review this Privacy Policy prior to registering on or using the Site.

Texas Molecular reserves the right to add to, update or otherwise modify this Privacy Policy at any time and we will post the revision date on this Privacy Policy page. The most current Privacy Policy will apply to all data and other information collected on the Site, no matter what version of the Privacy Policy was in effect when the information was collected.

In general, users can visit the Site without telling us who you are or revealing any information about yourself. Our Web servers may collect the domain names, not the e-mail addresses, of visitors. This information is aggregated to measure the number of visits, average time spent on the Site, pages viewed, and similar data. Texas Molecular uses this information to measure the use of our Site and to improve the content of our Site. There are times, however, when we may need personal information from you, for instance: to process an order, to correspond with you, to provide a service, or in connection with a job application. However, we will only collect this information when it is voluntarily submitted to us. When any personal information is collected, we will let you know, at the time of collection, how we will use the information you give to us by reference to this Privacy Policy.

Your Personal Information:

Texas Molecular will use personally identifiable information voluntarily submitted to us to respond to requests you make of us or to contact you in connection with your requests. Additionally, Texas Molecular may use that information to determine how we can improve our Site, business and services. Any and all uses will comply with applicable law.

In addition, we may use a technology called “cookies.” A cookie is a tiny element of data that a Website (including our Site) can send to your browser, which may then be stored on your hard drive so we can recognize you when you return. You may set your browser to notify you when you receive a cookie.

As a general rule, we do not sell or rent your personal or business information to any third party, except as described below or in connection with effectively maintaining and operating the Site. However, Texas Molecular cooperates with law enforcement and judicial inquires and other third parties to enforce laws, intellectual property and other rights. It may be necessary to furnish your information to third parties in connection with these objectives.

We may disclose the information we collect about you to our affiliates who offer Texas Molecular any disposal services, and to nonaffiliated third parties that perform services on our behalf, including marketing services, or parties with whom we have joint services and/or joint marketing agreements. We reserve the right to provide non-personal identifying information, such as aggregate data, to third parties.

Texas Molecular is concerned with the security of the data and information we collect and we use commercially reasonable physical, electronic and procedural safeguards to help ensure the security, integrity and privacy of all personal information. However, due to the inherent insecurity of the Internet, no security measures should be viewed as one hundred percent effective in all circumstances. Texas Molecular cannot absolutely guarantee against a breach of its security or the actions of third parties that may seek to obtain unauthorized access to personal information.

In the event of a security breach in which personal information has been acquired, or is reasonably believed to have been acquired, by an unauthorized person, and where applicable law requires notification, Texas Molecular will notify the affected individual of the breach; electronically, by email or fax, or if unable to contact the individual electronically, then by U.S. Postal Service. This notice will be given in a timely manner, consistent with legitimate needs of law enforcement and any measures necessary for Texas Molecular or law enforcement to determine the scope of the breach and to restore and assure the integrity of the data system.

In the case where law enforcement determines that notification will impede a criminal investigation, Texas Molecular may delay notification until law enforcement or we determine that notification will not compromise the investigation.
